

ANTI-SALOON FOLK HERE THIS WEEK

Virginia League to Open Its Annual Convention To-Morrow Night.

"Shall Virginia Have State-Wide Prohibition?" Subject of Address To-Night.

Delegates from all parts of the State are expected here to-night to attend the opening session of the Virginia Anti-Saloon League, which will open its sessions at Broad Street Methodist Church to-morrow night. A number of prominent speakers have been invited to describe saloon evils and to show the good effects of prohibition in those States which enacted it within the past few years.

Although it is not down as part of the convention program, an address will be delivered before the Men's League of the First Baptist Church tonight by Rev. J. D. McAllister, field secretary of the Virginia League of Virginia, on the text, "Shall Virginia Have State-Wide Prohibition?" Members of the General Assembly will be especially invited to-day to attend.

BLIZZARD DRIVING THEM TO SOUTHLAND IN DROVES

Tourist Travel, Which Picks Up With Every Snow Flurry in the North, Breaks High Records of All Former Seasons.

Railroad officials said yesterday that twelve inches of snow in New York and a blizzard raging throughout the East during the past few days had resulted in the heaviest tourist travel ever known heretofore at this season of the year. Special trains operated by the Atlantic Coast Line and the Seaboard Air Line between New York and Florida points have been so crowded before arriving in Richmond that it has been practically impossible to secure Pullman reservations southward. Fearing the tail-end of the blizzard in this section, the tourists have gone straight through to Florida, without halting on the half-way ground.

"I have been handling these tourist trains for six years," said a Seaboard Air Line passenger conductor yesterday, "but I have never seen the rush that the cold weather has started. As a matter of fact, the business thus far is about as heavy as it was all last season, and you must remember that the service was only established the first of the month. In some instances, local trains have been called upon to relieve the congestion, which is going in one direction only. It will be some time before traffic turns around and starts northward."

"The conductor on a passenger train has to answer a whirlwind of questions, as you can well imagine, and during the past few days I have explained and exploited the advantages of Richmond until I feel like the man who sits on top of a sight-seeing trolley-coach with a megaphone. It's hot down in Florida, so I asked the people who asked me about Richmond why they did not stay here first. Invariably they replied that they were afraid to take chances with the cold, adding that they had already secured reservations at the Jefferson for later in the spring. You know these tourists are 'bugged' on golf, and they are crazy to reach the links."

"The public doesn't realize what this business means to the South every winter. It brings millions of dollars. Personally, I'm glad the railroads are getting the first whack at the pocket-books."

It was said at the Jefferson Hotel last night that while tourist business there was gratifying, the real big crowds would not appear until the movement northward begins. But the number of early reservations indicates that this famous resort will have few vacant suites along about the Easter season.

NEED MORE LIGHTS ON BROAD STREET

Mr. Dabney Will Urge Merchants to Seek Full Benefit From New Electric Plant.

Invitations have been issued for the annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association, which will be held in the assembly-room of Murphy's Hotel on Thursday night. The meeting will be addressed by Business Manager William T. Dabney, of the Chamber of Commerce, whose speech will deal in the most part with the advantages of the new municipal electric plant to the community and especially to the retail merchant. He will also discuss a plan for widening the sidewalks of Broad Street five feet on each side and of illuminating the principal shopping district with electric lights on each corner and one in the center of every block in that section. Incidentally, he will speak for a closer relationship and more co-operation between the retail merchants and the Chamber of Commerce.

Though no slate has yet been made up, it is understood that all the old officers will be re-elected. President T. A. Miller, who is now serving his fourth term, has been approached by a number of members and is being urged to serve again. Reports will show that this year's membership is successful year since the organization of the association. The membership now numbers 180, more than have ever before been enrolled. The credit bureau organized three years ago for the protection of members has been used very largely, and now has on its list about 45,000 names of buyers dealing with the merchants of Richmond and vicinity.

After the business meeting a dinner will be served in the main dining-room of Murphy's Hotel.

PICKWICK CLUB

W. L. Price Installed as President at Their Annual Celebration. The third annual celebration of the Pickwick Club has been held at 508 East Franklin Street, was held Saturday night at Rueger's. A feature of the gathering was the installation of officers for the ensuing year. Those elected were: William L. Price, president; L. G. Larus, vice-president; T. T. Burr, secretary and treasurer; Edward McCarthy, assistant secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Price, the new president, responded in a few words of appreciation. Impromptu speech-making and toasts to the retiring officers and welfare of the club served to enliven the occasion. The present officers were: W. L. Price, L. G. Larus, E. A. Leake, E. T. Burr, Edward McCarthy, E. B. Allen, R. W. Carrington, Eugene Gilliam, H. W. Campbell, John Royal, Claire Evans, Larkin Glazebrook, Albert Word, Gilbert Larus, T. P. McCarthy and Messrs. Pritchard and Graham, of Danville.

When the cartridge exploded from the heat, the bullet struck the child in the forehead and sent her staggering back. She screamed, and as her mother, who was nearby, turned, blood poured from her head. Mrs. Israel, greatly alarmed, rushed to her daughter's side, and, picking her up, carried her into another room. She wiped the blood away, and discovered the wound. Not knowing how serious it was, one of the family immediately summoned Dr. Stuart MacLean.

Dr. MacLean said yesterday that he did not think the wound dangerous, though he could not tell how serious it might become. The child was put to bed afterwards, and several hours later was asleep. The wound was not discovered until the child was taken to the hospital.

How the child got hold of the cartridge no one could tell. She was playing in the kitchen when Mrs. Israel suddenly heard a report, and glancing around saw her daughter staggering away. She did not know at first how the accident happened, but the cause was soon discovered.

CORONER HOLDS WORLD'S RECORD

Thirty-eight Years in Office, Dr. Taylor Has Examined 3,477 Cases in All.

GIVES REPORT FOR YEAR Called on 302 Times in Twelve Months—Only One Death From Automobile Accident.

Coroner William H. Taylor, who designates himself as the only city official always on duty, was called on to investigate the causes of 302 deaths in 1909. Of this number, ninety-eight were of white people, 137 colored, and in seven instances the color could not be determined. There were 140 deaths from natural causes and eighty-three by violence.

The figures, as compared with 1908, show a decrease of four, but the average number of emergencies in the past two years has remained about the same. The number of colored persons is always largely in excess of the whites. Coroner Taylor's thirty-eight year in office expires next July, and in that brief period he has investigated 3,477 cases, which he claims is the record in the United States.

Causes of Sudden Deaths. Of the violent cases investigated last year there were eight homicides (shootings, 4; blows, 2; and each by cutting, stabbing), eight infanticides (colored, 7; white, 1—no arrests), eight suicides (shootings, 4; and 1 each by laudanum, morphine, throat cutting and carbolic acid), ten accidental poisonings (including gas, 5; and each by morphine, carbolic acid, arsenic and calomel), five by falling, four burned to death, two by horse vehicles, three by elevators, two by suffocation, one by strangulation, ten by steam cars, and one by a runaway horse.

There was one death resulting from an automobile accident, which is the first such case in Richmond. The summary of sudden deaths from natural causes included: From heart disease, 23; congestion of the lungs and other lung diseases, 29; apoplexy and other brain diseases, 19. Of these deaths, 13 were non-residents. Twenty-nine infants were found in the streets, and of the total number of bodies examined seventy were buried at the expense of the city.

Coroner Taylor has held over 100 inquests were held over bodies in which there was suspicion of foul play, and thirty-one post-mortem examinations were conducted. The ages of the victims ranged from infants to ninety years.

Coroner Taylor has systematized the work of making his reports ever since he has been in office, and has a complete list of every case that he has attended, which includes the cause of death, the name of the person, the address, parents and other particulars, which he often uses in furnishing information to the police and to relatives.

It is not so much what you have done for yourself," he said, "as it is that you have adhered to that training which moulded your mind and character, and that you have been able to train that comes out of the ground, the true teachings of a good mother."

A good mother, he said, was a woman of prayer and a woman of vows; a woman ambitious for her children, but whose ambition, unlike that which has been the undoing of many, is consecrated by her prayers. "An unconsecrated ambition," he said, "is a peril to one's life." He told of the Spartan mothers, who were the greatest factor in the country, because they raised their sons with the idea that their lives were consecrated to their nation and that the highest honor and reward lay in its service, even though it cost their lives.

Besides a mother's self-sacrifice and love, he called attention to the part that her little stories of glorious deeds, adventure and achievement played in moulding the infant character; how they fired the child to emulate the great heroes of whom she told, and made each one ambitious to be a great man.

"There are few of us so low," he said, "as not to feel the influence of these memories of our childhood days."

NEW DRAMATIC CLUB HAS BEEN ORGANIZED

The Hebrew Progressive Dramatic Club was organized on Saturday night at 618 North Ninth Street. An interesting social session, the plans of the new organization were discussed. The first year were chosen, with Gilbert Rosenau as president and Lue Jaffee as vice-president. Moss Miller was elected secretary and treasurer. The committee on arrangements consists of Isi Hovsha, Lue Canter and Lue Sacks. The objects of the club are to present short plays and operas for the entertainment of the members and their friends. The next meeting will be to-night at the same place.

BOARD INDORSES BILL

White Slave Traffic Is, However, Undesirable in Richmond. The Board of Police Commissioners has highly indorsed Speaker Byrd's bill to prohibit white slave traffic in Virginia, more, however, with the idea of preventing it here, than with the idea of stopping it, for there is no white slave traffic in the State, so far as is known.

It is not probable that the traffic will ever be introduced into Virginia. The bill, however, will be a deterrent to the traffic, and will meet with their most earnest support.

SLIM CHANCE OF SAVING HIS LIFE

Raymond Smith, Street Car Victim, Has Been Unconscious for Many Hours in Hospital.

Raymond Smith, thirteen years old, of 613 East Main Street, has not regained consciousness since he suffered a compound fracture of the skull, at the base of the brain, in a street car accident, Saturday night. An operation was performed at the Virginia Hospital yesterday afternoon and the patient reacted slightly afterwards. His condition is extremely critical, and there is scarcely any chance of his recovery.

The operation was performed by Dr. Stuart MacLean. Mrs. C. S. Smith, mother of the boy, spent some time in the hospital yesterday, but was not allowed to enter the room. The crew of the car was not arrested, and it is said that the accident could not have been avoided.

Smith was hurt in a collision near First and Grace Streets, and was riding on the rear of a car driven by William Tullian, colored, which was smashed by an Oakwood and Broad Street car.

TARHEEL TRYING TO GET DATE FOR DANIEL WEBSTER

Sounds Lyceum Manager on Possibility of Engaging Patrick Henry as Another Platform Speaker for Big Show in His Town.

"This beats anything I've seen in a long time," said Mr. Radcliffe, the Lyceum man, as he came out of the post-office yesterday afternoon with an open letter in his hand. "Here is a request from a man in a small North Carolina town who wants me to send somebody there to lecture. That of itself is not surprising, but he asks that I send Bob Taylor, of Tennessee; Daniel Webster or Patrick Henry. You might imagine that he was trying to kid me, as the saying goes, but he is in earnest. The best thing I can do is to send him a copy of The Times-Dispatch showing where Mr. Bell, of Culpeper, is trying to have the Legislature erect a monument in Richmond to the memory of Patrick Henry."

"Recently I had a letter from Kentucky, a local manager asking if it would be possible to have Henry Clay lecture there on a percentage basis. Taking the other side of the argument, another Kentuckian asked me to engage Henry Clay to deliver a series of talks on Wine, Women and Gambling, which he said was the best thing of its kind ever reeled. I don't doubt that, but we did not make a trade."

The other day a stranger went to see Mr. Radcliffe with the hope of signing up. He had with him a manuscript of an eloquent address ever written—a speech which would make the hair stand on the top of a man's head. He tried to recite it in the office, when he was gently reminded that the police might interfere.

DR. BAGBY FOUND EACH SCREAMED BLOODY MURDER

Virginia Physician, Who First Realized Danger of Disease Commends Rockefeller Gift.

Dr. B. B. Bagby and wife, of West Point, passed through Richmond yesterday on their way to Atlanta to attend the Hookworm Conference. Dr. Bagby was the first physician to find and treat any number of cases of hookworm in Virginia, and to call attention of the physicians to the importance of the subject. He is just as enthusiastic over the subject as ever, and has little patience with the ignorant and prejudiced people who do not believe in the prevalence of the disease, and who are opposing the Rockefeller gift of $1,000,000 toward its eradication.

Dr. Bagby said yesterday the people of Virginia who appropriate to the State Board of Health only a little more than 1 cent for each inhabitant to protect its citizens from all diseases should not spurn help from outsiders, especially when the legislature declares that the State is too poor to appropriate more.

"Yes, hookworm disease is all over the State, and the reason that it is not more often found is because we have been looking only for the typical anaemic cases," said Dr. Bagby. "These cases are not so common in Virginia as further South, but if we realize that every child who has dewitch is infected with hookworm, we can readily see how common it is in the State. Of course, I do not mean that cases of eczema, chilblains, or boils on the feet are caused by this disease, but all cases of genuine dewitch, readily recognized by any barefooted country boy, are caused by the penetration of the hookworm larvae through the skin."

The larvae are hatched from the eggs in moist earth in about four or five days, and as the barefooted boy wades through the mud, the young worm clings to his foot and burrows through the skin, like a "chigger," causing the foot-itch. It works its way into a blood vessel and stays in the circulating blood until it gets further. There it burrows through the intestinal walls, where it will remain for years unless expelled by treatment.

"Each worm is said to lay from 2,000 to 5,000 eggs a day. These in turn often infect the same person."

Two Alleged Spunk-Enals. Robert Mills and Annie Will, both colored, were arrested yesterday on a charge of selling liquor without a license. Each occupied a separate place, and each is alleged to have been caught in the act. The officers confiscated a quantity of beer and whiskey as evidence.

Mr. Lambeth Ill. George B. Lambeth, of 10 Meadow Street, is critically ill at his home.

REVEALS IDENTITY BY HELPING RAMP

Hero of Many Battles in James River Never Sought Publicity or Praise.

HAS RESCUED MANY PEOPLE Theodorick Nunally, Night Watchman, Tells How He Robbed Water of Its Prey.

When Theodorick Nunally, of 723 South Cherry Street, visited the City Home yesterday to inquire into the condition of James Dooley, a tramp, whom he rescued from death by freezing in a less than two weeks ago, he was told that the patient may never recover from the effects of exposure on one of the coldest nights of the winter. Nunally, who is a fifty-year-old, walked from his home to the almshouse, and while there, related to attentive listeners numerous experiences he has had in saving the lives of many tramps. He said that the past forty years have been a face to face with death in the treacherous waters of the James River.

Nunally's home is that he has never lived further than 300 yards from the river bank, and this he says is too far away for a man who has saved so many lives. He has no other one or another of the several islands opposite Richmond. His visit to Dooley yesterday is by no means the first. He has made the City Home to look after the welfare of some persons he has either rescued from drowning or else sheltered after exposure.

He has saved many lives. In all kinds of weather, all seasons, Nunally is constantly prepared to give aid to any sufferer he may find, and time and again, often at the peril of his own life, he has dragged some helpless man or boy from the canal or river. Nearly all Nunally's energies to save the part of a hero have occurred at night, and his victims have been persons unfamiliar with the territory, who have stepped into the water in the dark, or who have been upriver endeavoring to row across the stream.

For thirty years, this man, who has been ten years in the river of his prey, has been making the City Home a paper mill, at the foot of Cherry Street, back of Hollywood Cemetery, where he has been saving many lives. He has never accepted compensation for any of his services, and has returned to express his gratitude.

"I have frequently read in the newspapers of men who have saved, and the accounts have always stated that the rescuer was an 'unknown' man, or a 'stranger,' and this was because I did not want my name to be known," said Nunally. "I don't care for praise or glory. All I want is the satisfaction of having done my duty as a fellowman and to feel that my life, even though humble, has not been in vain. I was surprised when my name came out in the papers, and the only reason it did was because he was so far gone I had to take him home with me."

Both men met at the First Police Station, where each demanded a warrant. But the police, who knew him, did not issue one, and there were no witnesses, and there was no charge, anyway, they could bring against the darkey.

"Sorry, gentlemen," said the magistrate, "but the joke's on you." The negro hadn't violated the Sunday law, for his conduct was not a crime, and there was no charge, anyway, they could bring against the darkey.

The man who drank the vinegar didn't get his face untwisted until after he had left the station. Each had paid 50 cents for his bottle, and the outfit could have been bought at any grocery store for 5 cents. The negro's pants were large, but it was well for his hide if he met these two dupes again.

"I asked him for whiskey," said the first duke, "and he gave me oil. I asked for whiskey," said the second, "and he gave me vinegar. It was as the man who had asked for a fish and they gave him a stone; for bread and they gave him a stone."

FOUND DEAD IN BED

Charles L. Akers, Eighty-Three Years Old, Did Not Appear at Breakfast. Charles L. Akers, of 815 East Franklin Street, was found dead in his bed about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. He did not appear at breakfast time, and the discovery was made by a neighbor. He was eighty-three years old. Coroner Taylor viewed the remains, and pronounced death due to apoplexy.

WANT LINE EXTENDED

Citizens of County Urge Street Car Company to Build Into Rich Section. More than 100 citizens of the county lying between Fulton and the National Cemetery, in Henrico county, have signed a petition to the Virginia Railway and Power Company to extend the turning point in Fulton to the National Cemetery, a distance of about one mile. In addition, many have approached officers of the company on the subject, and it is said that the look with favor on the proposition.

Big Blaze Always Comes Along About Time Actress Appears in Richmond.

Four of Richmond's biggest fires in recent years have occurred either on the night of the appearance of Lillian Russell at one of the local theatres, or closely have they preceded or followed her performances that the firemen have begun to consider the coming of a star as a signal to prepare for trouble. Of course, it is not believed that the stately stage woman has caused the fires, but some people believe in signs, and firemen are not exempted as free thinkers.

Members of the local department were congratulating themselves, after the recent visit of Miss Russell to this city, that the "hoodoo" had lost its power, when the building of the University College of Medicine was destroyed, and this has caused a renewal of the belief that Lillian follows the actress to this city.

On one occasion, if Miss Russell had been of the kind that enjoys an spectacular, she might have seen the destruction of the Richmond Store Works, in East Main Street, because her show was on at the time. She was here at the time of another recent disaster, which the narrator of these strange coincidences cannot remember.

Years ago, Miss Russell happened to be the attraction on the night preceding the destruction of the Allen Building, at Seventh and Cary Streets. There is little wonder that fire-fighters are becoming cynical, and it is entirely within the bounds of the possible to believe that those arranging Miss Russell's tours to arrange things so that she may go around Richmond in future.

WATCH FOR STRINGS ON FINGERS TO-DAY

So Important is the Berry Sale which begins to-day to every man in Richmond, that every means should be employed to avoid the possibility of failure to attend it.

Suits, Overcoats, Hats, Shoes and Trunks of the finest quality will be sold at less than wholesale prices in many instances, and as different grades are frequently lumped at a single price, first choice is desirable.

Mothers as a rule are more alert when real bargains are available. Their outpouring will be evidence of the winter wardrobe as the most tempting ever exploited by the house of O. H. Barry & Co.

PLAN FEAST FOR CHINESE NEW YEAR

Local Chinese will celebrate their New Year's Day on February 8, and at a meeting held last night in the shop of Sam Lee, of Mow Wah & Company, 1717 East Main Street, plans for the festivities were made.

The meeting was presided over by James Cunningham, who is the best informed man on Chinese customs and habits in Richmond. He is probably the only white man whom the Chinese know and trust in this city, and he is the only white man who can get into their confidence and take part in their celebrations and festivities. He is a counselor and adviser to the local colony, of which Sam Lee is Mayor, and in all their troubles they go to him.

The Chinese New Year is as great an institution as the New Year of other peoples, and it is their greatest feast. All the home delicacies are imported from China for the occasion, and the fun lasts for the full twenty-four hours. Friends write congratulatory letters to each other, and send presents. Some times the letters contain only a few words, some times they are a yard long.

The Richmond Chinese will hold their celebration in Sam Lee's shop, as he is their recognized leader. There are ten members at present in the colony, and every one will be present on the same day. All here belong to the same family. All here have differences such as some times disturb the colonies in the larger cities.
